TO REOPEN BAFF CASE.

Call Issued to Reassemble Jury Which Indicted Cohen.

At the request of Attorney General Lewis, Justice Tompkins has issued a call for the reassembling this afternoon of the Special Grand Jury which indicted Joseph Cohen, Aug. 12, 1917, for the murder of Barnett Buff, the poultry merchant, to consider evidence of an attempt having been made to bribe Antonio Cardinella, chief State's witness against Cohen, to alter his testimony against the indicted gun man.

The existence of a conspiracy to bring pressure to bear upon Cardinella recently, became known to Deputy Attorney General O'Malley and Becker, who moved to bring about this reopening of a sensational case. Cohen now awaits execution at Sing Sing some time next month.

'PERSECUTED,' SAYS O'LEARY ON STAND AT BROTHER'S TRIAL

Blames His Indictment on Disappointment of Interests Behind Mitchell for Mayor.

That Jeremiah A. O'Leary was sacrificed to make a Fusion issue in the last Mayoralty campaign, and that his indictment and subsequent "persecution," as he termed it, were the result of the bitter disappointment of the interests behind Mitchell, was set forth in an impassioned speech by the Irish agitator on the witness stand in the Federal Court to-day.

O'Leary was being cross-examined by Earl B. Barnes, Assistant United States Attorney, in the trial of John J. O'Leary for conspiracy to aid his brother's flight to Washington.

Mr. Barnes asked O'Leary to relate the conversation that took place between himself and Arthur Lyons in the back seat of John J. O'Leary's automobile the night of May 6. That was the night before he fled to the Northwest to escape trial on an indictment charging violation of the espionage act.

TALKED ABOUT INDICTMENT AND UNIVERSAL SERVICE VIEWS.

"If you want to know everything I said to Arthur Lyons that night I'll tell you. But I said some things about you, Mr. Barnes," the witness warned.

"Well, go ahead," said Mr. Barnes. "I talked about my indictment and said it was a plan of Government officials who disapproved of my political views to get me out of the way. I told him I was accused of obstructing the draft, when, as a matter of fact, I had served my six years. And, moreover, I told him that when I was asked by certain persons to run for Mayor on an anti-draft platform I refused because I was in favor of universal service."

"I told him I was accused of obstructing recruiting and enlistment and inciting troops to mutiny, when, as a matter of fact, all my speeches and writings have been in public, open and aboveboard so that everybody might know what my motives were."

"I never made a speech in my life when the newspapers quoted me correctly. They always put words in my mouth. They created a character out of my speeches that I never recognized. I told him that there wasn't a German prisoner brought before the Department of Justice officials at No. 21 Park Row who wasn't asked if he didn't know Jeremiah O'Leary, and if he knew me and could betray me in any way he was offered his freedom as a reward."

"I told him I thought my persecution was brought about by political issues. I was dragged out by Mayor Mitchell and paraded on every platform and in every speech in his campaign. I told him I was made an issue by an unpopular administration that didn't have anything better to base its campaign on. I told him that the indictment came as a result of the bitter disappointment of Mitchell's unprecedented defeat, and that it was an effort to restore Mitchell to political favor so that he could come back when he wanted to and hold office again."

"I told him that you were over-coming with the responsibility of your office and were making desperate efforts to get rid of me. I told him your reputation was at stake and you thought more of your reputation. Mr. Barnes, than you did of seeing a man get justice. I told him I didn't get a square deal before the Grand Jury."

"I also told Lyons that the United States ought to be big enough to realize that a man who had always been a loyal citizen, who had a wife and four children, who had been a productive citizen, was entitled to a fair trial and counsel."

"I talked about those things that night and about them all the way to Washington and all the way back. I am talking about them now, Mr. Barnes, and will continue to talk about them to my dying day."

O'Leary later supplemented this statement by saying he had told Lyons that Mr. Barnes had pushed the case to trial when he learned that O'Leary's counsel, Henry A. Wise, was called to Washington on the Federal Trade Board.

CHANGES TESTIMONY ABOUT FINDING SUIT OF CLOTHES.

Mr. Barnes questioned O'Leary at length regarding the incident of the suit of clothes. Arthur Lyons, the Government's chief witness, had testified that John O'Leary had procured the suit at Jeremiah's request, and had given it to him brother with the intention of furnishing a disguise for his travels. Yesterday Jeremiah testified that he had found the old suit beside a rattan suitcase in the kitchen of John's home and had taken it without conferring with his brother. To-day he said he recalled that he had found the old suit in a closet of the room where he spent the night.

The witness said he felt that Lyons was closer to him than his brother because he had worked with him almost continuously for six years, whereas he had seen little of John O'Leary. For this reason he talked things over with Lyons more than with John when the crisis of his trial and his recuperation trip were impending.

He said Lyons was determined that O'Leary should go to Reno with him, while John was determined that he should go to Newburgh.

O'Leary admitted in answer to questions by Attorney Barnes for the prosecution to writing propaganda pamphlets attacking Great Britain, setting forth that the United States was in danger of becoming a subsidiary State to the British Empire. O'Leary's activities as head of the Bull Publishing Company were brought out by Mr. Barnes. The witness admitted that the American Truth Society controlled the publication Bull, and that he had charge of employing and discharging the editors. O'Leary denied that he knew Carl Rodiger, accused German spy, saying he had only read of him in the newspapers.

The cross examination of O'Leary was interrupted to allow the defense to place a character witness for John O'Leary, Mrs. Ellen McCreight Lyons, wife of James Hyne, the attorney, on the stand. She testified that before she left for Europe in 1914 she executed a power of attorney to John O'Leary and two other lawyers, empowering them to sell, transfer and otherwise administer the securities and properties in her estate amounting to several million dollars. Mrs. Hyne said she knew John O'Leary well and that his reputation for honesty, integrity and loyalty to country was good.

GRAFT IN WAR CONTRACTS LAID TO SECRET METHODS

Navy's Plan of Publishing Its Needs May Be Extended to Army.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Examination of correspondence seized by the Department of Justice agents from offices of illegal contractors for agencies has convinced them that, although the system by which middlemen obtained contracts for manufacturers is improper and undesirable, it had certain justification in view of the difficulty experienced by many contractors in making connections in Washington with the bureau or departments having charge of contracts for articles they manufactured.

For this reason the Department of Justice is making special efforts, it was announced to-day, to formulate a new method for supplying adequate information on all Government needs to manufacturers and to make the services of contract agents entirely unnecessary. In this connection the Navy is publishing periodically what it desires to buy, in order to give examination, and some features of this may be extended to the War Department.

APPEAL BONNET ROUGE CASE

Leymarie Lost to Attack Treason Conviction.

PARIS, June 21.—Jean Leymarie, former Director of the Ministry of the Interior, convicted last month of complicity in treasonable actions in connection with the newspaper Bonnet Rouge, has entered an appeal to the Court of Cassation. Five other defendants, M. Duval, Director of the Bonnet Rouge, condemned to death, and M. Jouca, a reporter; M. Marion, assistant manager of the Bonnet Rouge; M. Goudy, and Jacques Lathuilliere, of the Bonnet Rouge, sentenced to prison, already had entered appeals. It is expected that the Court of Cassation will receive the appeals at once and render its decision in about three weeks.

NEW HOSPITAL FOR BRONX IN OLD EICHLER MANSION

Workers Start Campaign for $40,000 Fund to Equip Institution.

About 1,500 Bronx residents celebrated the acquisition of a new hospital at the old Eichler mansion, Fulton Avenue and 162nd Street, just purchased for the Bronx Hospital and Dispensary last week. Members of the Hospital Association also started a campaign for a $40,000 fund for alterations and equipment.

Samuel Feinzel, Chairman of the Building Committee, told of the lack of hospital facilities in that section of the borough, and reviewed the steps which led up to the purchase of the mansion. Manhattan, with a population of 2,371,000, has thirty-three general hospitals; Brooklyn, with 2,023,000, has twenty-seven; Queens, with 300,000, has nine; while the Bronx, with 600,000, has only five. Of Jewish hospitals Manhattan has eleven, compared with one in the Bronx, where the Jewish population is 220,000, only a little less than one-third that of Manhattan.

Former Ambassador Morgenthau urged a more general support of Bronx hospitals, and spoke optimistically of the future of the new hospital. Dr. A. A. Berg, chief physician of the hospital, Dr. Alexander Goldman, its President; Douglas Mathewson, former Borough President; Dr. Clifton H. Levy, Judge Louis B. Glavin, Mrs. Flora Thompson, President of the Ladies' Auxiliary, and Benjamin Antin, President of the Young Folks' League, also spoke.

"ZUMMER IS A CUMIN' IN" TO-MORROW MORNING EARLY

Will Be Longest Day Ever Known Here and Only "a Little Warmer."

At eight minutes before 1 o'clock to-morrow morning it will be summer and, thanks to the entire cordial between Congress and the solar system, it will also be the longest day that ever happened in these parts.

The solar system had planned to make to-morrow as long a day as possible anyway, and it is made an hour longer by Act of Congress—the Daylight Saving Act.

As for weather, the best that the Bureau can offer is "a little warmer," whereas it would have to be a good deal warmer to be regular summer stuff. The mercury to-day went down to 57, which is chilly for June 21, but not record-breaking. The coldest June 21 heretofore recorded was 50.

ILL, STABS HIMSELF, DIES.

Charles Landau, fifty-one years old, a patient in the Rivercrest Sanatorium at Astoria, died to-day as the result of self-inflicted wounds with a knife.

Landau had been allowed to return to his family at No. 2026 Clinton Place, Woodhaven, last week, but he grew violent yesterday, and when Supervisor Sheppard of the sanatorium went to the house to bring Landau back the patient stabbed Sheppard in the abdomen as well as cutting himself severely. Sheppard is not in danger.

White Low Shoes

For Women, Reasonably Priced

WHITE is the prevailing summer shade, mainly because it creates that atmosphere of coolness so sought during the terribly hot weather.

One not clad in white at the seashore, in the mountains or even in town, will not feel as cool as the person in white, and certainly will not appear as cool and refreshing.

And the finishing touch is a pair of nice White Shoes from Cammeyer. We have any style or shape your heart may desire, too.
